

Speaking with CBR at this years San Diego Comic Con J. Michael Straczynski gives his take on just about everything going on in comics these days. He talks about DC's upcoming 52, his work on Superman, Wonder Woman and his involvement in Marvels THOR film. I have transcribed a portion of the interview covering the THOR film below, which starts at around the 10 minute mark. On seeing the THOR movie come to life knowing his story line helped inspire the film... "The book inspired it and I got to work with them on creating the story for the film itself. What was fun about it was when Marvel wanted to reboot THOR and put him out there, nobody wanted to touch it. Neal Gaiman, he said no, no, no and ran off into the night. Mark Millar and he said no. I said 'I know what to do with this character.' Finally they

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GulfCoastAvengers/news/?a=43728&t=JMS_Talks_About_His_Involvement_With_Marvels_iTHOR_i_Film_and_Much_More