

Superman fans seem split between sympathy and contempt for the estates of Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster who have gone after their legal right to reclaim certain aspects of the Man of Steel's copyright. Back in December, Joanne Siegel, wife of Jerry and the model for Lois Lane way back at the beginning, wrote a letter to Warner Bros. Chairman and CEO Jeffrey Bewkes, which is heartfelt and puts a human face on all the courtroom drama that has gone on. It will be interesting to see how/if the studio responds and how far-reaching this letter is thanks to the Internet. Normally we would only print an excerpt, but with all due respect and acknowledgment of Deadline as the source, we felt it important to present the entire letter. Please weigh in on your views. December 10, 2010 Jeffrey L. Bewkes Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Time Warner Inc. Dear Jeff, I am Joanne Siegel widow of Jerry

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/VoicesFromKrypton/news/?a=33968&t=Joanne Siegel - Wife of Superman co-creator Jerry Siegel - Letter to Warner Bros