

While some sites were reporting the Deathstroke art Joe Manganiello tweeted to Geoff Johns on his birthday as official concept art, CBM quickly identified it as fan art from talented Deviant Artist Jeran Morales. A few days later, it seems Manganiello felt the need to clear up the confusion and give Morales some props at the same time. However, while doing so, he confirmed what many suspected, that the footage released was just a screen test for Deathstroke's armor. So does this deflate those theories that the character will appear in the Justice League film before tangling with The Bat in the DCEU's first standalone Batman film? Was Zack Snyder actually looking over Ben Affleck's storyboards for The Batman and not for his own film in this Tweet? Thanks to @jeran_art for this awesome shot of me from the armor screen test. #DEATHSTROKE pic.twitter.com/1IEYLQ6vrc — Joe Manganiello (@JoeManganiello) January 27, 2017

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/batman/joe-manganiello-says-deathstroke-footage-was-just-a-screen-test-for-the-a148503>