

New York Comic Con is in full swing, and while announcements haven't been coming in abundance we have gotten a few nuggets. Newsarama sat down with Marvel Chief Creative Officer Joe Quesada during the Con where he talked about a number of things from splitting his time on the east and west coast, east being the comic book side of his job west being the movie side, to what we can look forward to from Marvel movies. The first thing He talked about was Guardians Of The Galaxy. With Marvel doing their version of a soft reboot, titled Marvel Now, Quesada said you can expect the GOTG comic book to go along with the movie in some ways. "There is stuff that I know is going on with the movie that we might be able to apply to the Marvel Cosmic Universe. And try and develop that Synergy. Not to copy
