

It was revealed last month that star of AMC's The Killing, Joel Kinnaman, was in talks to play RoboCop in MGM's planned reboot of the franchise. Deadline now reports that the deal has been closed and he will play the character (originally brought to the big screen by actor Peter Weller in the 1987 film) in Jose Padilha's reboot of the franchise. They add that Strike Entertainment partners Eric Newman and Marc Abraham are producing with a script from Josh Zetumer. Kinnaman most recently appeared alongside Ryan Reynolds and Denzel Washington in Safe House. How do you feel about the decision to cast the actor? Sound off with your thoughts below.
