

Speaking with Collider, The Killing's Joel Kinnaman discusses the anticipated reboot of the RoboCop franchise. He confirms that filming begins in September, while also saying that he saw the original film many times before taking the title role in José Padilha's reboot. He also discusses the level of interest in the project, as well as working with Gary Oldman (who plays 'Norton' in the movie). On The Level Of Interest In RoboCop: It's like when you say one thing, it's everywhere, and that's pretty awesome and a little bit intimidating. It makes you realize you have to think before speaking. That's a quality I'm continuously evolving. For some reason, it seems like I'm bumping my head into the wall a little bit too many times, but now I think I'm doing alright. It's fantastic. I used to be like "Why are we doing a remake? What are remakes being

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=60821>