

Talking with The Hollywood Reporter, director Jon M. Chu discusses his upcoming action film G.I. Joe: Retaliation. In the interview, he discusses casting Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson and Bruce Willis, the character of Roadblock (Johnson), rebooting the cast from 2009's The Rise Of Cobra and whether or not the absence of some of the characters in that film will be addressed in the sequel. Chu also talks about making a G.I. Joe film "for people who don't know anything about G.I. Joe". On Casting Dwayne Johnson And Bruce Willis: He [Willis] was always our dream guy to play Joe Colton, the original Joe, [but] I didn't necessarily know if he would ever do something like this. It's such a very specific brand -- the character Joe Colton exists, but not really. But the question I keep getting from people like my mom is, "well, who plays Joe?" And there is no

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=58450>