

Speaking with MTV Geek, director Jon M. Chu talked about his two upcoming projects (which both happen to be toy adaptations) G.I. Joe: Retaliation and Masters Of The Universe.

Originally slated for a June 2012 release, the former was pushed back to March 29th, 2013 to convert to 3D. Chu talks about his desire to push the usage of 3D, and whether or not he's interesting in filming Masters Of The Universe in the 3D format. He also says that he's not drawing from any single source for Sony Pictures' reboot, and that he's emerging himself into the He-Man world (similar to G.I. Joe and Step Up). For the full interview, click the link below.

“I really want to push how we use the 3-D. Especially since we pushed the movie date, I want to fulfill the promise to the fans that the 3-D will be great,

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=69287>