

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=28005&t=Jon_Hamm_Aged_Out_of_Superman_Role

Chatting recently with MTV at the Critics' Choice Movie Awards, Mad Men actor Jon Hamm, who've been longly treasured for the lead role in Warner Bros. Zack Snyder-directed Superman, The Man of Steel, now basically rules himself out as a candidate; essentially due to his age. "I talked to Zack [Snyder] quite a bit," Hamm told MTV News about his "Sucker Punch" director. "We had some looping and some reshoots and stuff to do on 'Sucker Punch.' But no, I think that's a young man's game now. I think I've been aged out of that one by now, but that's fine with me. There are plenty of other people available to put on tights." Commencing production in August, expected to last a full year, Superman, The Man Of Steel will reportedly be released in Mid-December 2012 (14th – 21st).