

More The Golden Age Videos Sounds like a very intriguing premise. It was previously reported that Matthew Vaughn was likewise blown away by the concept and wanted to make that his next feature film. It is generally assumed that Jane Goldman, the screenwriter for Kick Ass and X-Men First Class would pen the script. Goldman just coincidentally happens to be Ross' wife. It was also previously reported by Deadline that Vaughn wants Clint Eastwood, Jack Nicholson, and Warren Beatty to star. From Deadline: Kick-Ass and X-Men: First Class writer/director/producer Matthew Vaughn tells me that a major Hollywood studio is very keen to fully fund his next big project: The Golden Age about a retirement home where superheroes end up. And the title is also a reference to early comic books of the 1930s when Superman and Batman first appeared. It's based on the yet-to-be-published comic book written by Brit TV

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=47872&t=emJonathan_Rossem_Provides_Updates_On_emGolden_Ageem_emMatthew_Vaughnsem_Next_Comic-To-Film_Adaptation