

Stars of the film, Will Smith and Josh Brolin took part in a press conference at the Copacabana Palace in Rio this past Thursday. Most of the banter was lighthearted, but some new details about the film and the process of making the film did surface. Special thanks to CBM's own Lucaxmen for translating the press conference. gazetadopovo.com.br The franchise had plenty of fun in the first film when they revealed that many celebrities were actually aliens. They showed a screen that monitored the aliens on the planet, one of the images they used was the surly Republican, Newt Gingrich. Though another celebrity disappointed the producers because he wouldn't allow his image for this scene, and that was Michael Jackson. But funny enough, Jackson would make a cameo in the sequel as a contributor to the MIB hoping to become an agent. This new film follows Agent J as he goes back in time
