

In an interview with The Playlist, Chronicle director Josh Trank admits that a follow up is by no means set in stone, and suggests that even if Fox wanted to move ahead with a sequel, he may not.. "I'm still not sure [about 'Chronicle 2']. I was nervous this type of movie would be perceived as a gimmick. So I was in denial for awhile about what the potential of the film could be." Admittedly, as much as I would love to see a sequel to the brilliant Chronicle, I'm not sure using the same found footage technique would really work a second time. It may be better to switch to a more conventional style, but would that have the same impact? Anyway, Trank also addressed those Fantastic Four reboot rumors that refuse to go away. In the past he has kind of avoided the question, saying things like "We'll see", "I know

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsraints/news/?a=54834&t=Josh Trank On Potential Sequel To CHRONICLE Definitively Shoots Down FANTASTIC FOUR Rumors