

Talking to Empire Magazine, Josh Trank has once again expressed interest in helming the planned Fantastic Four reboot for 20th Century Fox, despite last month claiming that he hadn't even spoken to the studio about it. "I'm interested in character and interpersonal conflict," he revealed when asked about what his vision for a reboot featuring the team would include. "What's cool about Fantastic Four, which is an amazing property, is that these are people who started out as human beings, for the most part. Coming to terms with with humanity is the biggest challenge, not the villains they face." It certainly sounds as if he has a good idea of what a Fantastic Four movie would need to include, but whether or not the rumors were false or he simply chose Venom in preference is unknown. He added, "The best opportunity in my life was to make Chronicle. The next biggest opportunity

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=55895>