

Talking to The Huffington Post while promoting his latest release, Much Ado About Nothing, director Joss Whedon has revealed a little more about exactly how much creative control the success of The Avengers has resulted in him having with Marvel Studios' upcoming slate of adaptations. Unfortunately, when asked about the online speculation that Clark Gregg's 'Agent Coulson' will be brought back as 'The Vision', he doesn't really address the question! Check out his comments below and sound off with your thoughts in the usual place. Clark Gregg is in "Much Ado," too. The Internet is saying he could return in the sequel to "The Avengers" as Vision. I don't know how this works. If you wanted that to happen, could you make that happen? Do you have that power? I have some power, you know? I think there's a level of trust. You know, Kevin Feige and I have always had mutual respect,

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=67151>