

Following Yahoo Movies' big revelation of character banners for Marvel's The Avengers, they also managed to score a lengthy chat with the writer and director of the highly-anticipated superhero ensemble flick, Joss Whedon. Discussing many aspects of the film including coping with Robert Downey Jr., the expansion of Samuel L. Jackson's 'Nick Fury,' a fresh take on Mark Ruffalo's 'Bruce Banner,' and challenges, among other big things, take a gander at the lengthy interview down below. On the process of earning the trust of the talented ensemble cast: Well, first of all, because they've played parts and because in some way we were creating a new vision of the part, I sat down with every one of them to talk about my ideas and their desires before I wrote the script, and that's very useful too. So they knew from the ground-up that they were collaborating on it. And the things that didn't

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=49982&t=Joss Whedon Elaborates On the Characters And Development Process Of iThe Avengersi