

During the SXSW film festival, in yet another interview, Marvel's The Avengers helmer Joss Whedon discussed the much-anticipated film nearing completion. Talking with MTV News this time around, Whedon dotted on witnessing Oscar-nominated composer Alan Silvestri at work, what he's expecting from audiences, what his Cabin in the Woods director and co-writer thought of the film and more! "The most satisfying thing about 'The Avengers' is that soon I will finish it," he said with a weary smile. "That's quite an undertaking — although listening to Alan Silvestri conduct an 80-piece orchestra didn't suck. It was a really beautiful experience," he said of watching the composer at work. "He did such a great job: You're listening to live music and watching your movie form in a way that it doesn't until it has that music. That was exciting." Whedon said he enjoyed "just having all [of the cast]." "When they would

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=56167>