

Forbes have conducted a lengthy interview with the man of the hour, Avengers director/writer Joss Whedon. As his superhero ensemble continues to bust blocks and thrill fans the world over, he reveals what CBMs he feels are great examples of the genre and why. He also praises Christopher Nolan's Batman movies, stating that while he loves The Dark Knight, he prefers Nolan's first take on The Caped Crusader.. What, in your view, have been the great superhero movies? I still think the first two "Spideys" were unmatched. I think they captured the comic and found some cinematic extensions of that that were purely cinematic. Again, I think "Watchmen" was slavishly adherent to the comic, and that sometimes is almost as bad as completely ignoring the comic and just using the title. I think "Batman Begins" is certainly my favorite Batman movie I've seen. Huh, not "The Dark Knight"? Most people would say "The Dark

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrrants/news/?a=59397>