

While talking to Collider director Joss Whedon opened up about the run time of Marvel's The Avengers. He says the first cut was about three hours long, but has been cut down. And if you're hoping to see a longer director's cut, don't count on it. He is very adamant that the final cut is the best cut. "My first cut was three hours long and it's now down to 2 hours and 15 minutes, and I'm extremely proud of that. I had always intended to go over two, under two and a half. There was no way a movie with this many great actors and this much epic scope was gonna clock in under two and not feel a little anemic, somebody wasn't gonna get their moment if that happened. But at the same time, I get very angry that romantic comedies run over two hours long, it's
