"It's great, he's been weaving his way through every movie and I really get to play with him and have [him do] a lot of stuff. There were things that during the writing, I was like, 'I need something more here... Oh, Coulson!' and he just, he comes up every time. Clark is such a wonderful guy but also such a precise actor. The whole troupe is so amazing, I'm actually surprised." "I have reached the top, I'm going down the other side, I've just realized my Sherpa guide is frozen to death and several of my toes are missing," he added when asked about how work is progressing on the movie so far. "But we are on our way down." As for how he's feeling, Whedon revealed that he's not yet got to the point where his
