

Joss Whedon helmed two billion dollar hits with The Avengers and Avengers: Age of Ultron, and while he's since turned his attentions to lower budget projects, you have to believe that the filmmaker will return to the blockbuster realm at some point down the line. Seeing him back in the Marvel Cinematic Universe would be nice, but it turns out that he's particularly keen on a Star Wars Anthology movie. "I mean, it's a fun thing to do, to put yourself in the service of something if you think you can add an interpretation. It's no different than any other storytelling. There are some times when you get micro-managed to death but with Marvel, they let me make two movies that were very much mine. So do I want to make James Bond movie? Yeah. Anne Hathaway does Catwoman again? Sure, I'm in. Do I want to make a Star Wars movie? Yeah. I was like, "I don't want to make a Star

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/scifi\_movies/star\_wars/joss-whedon-talks-batman-v-superman-wonder-woman-and-a146180