

In an hour long podcast interview with Making It with Riki Lindhome, Joss Whedon has gone into great detail about the behind-the-scenes process of shooting Marvel's The Avengers. You can check it out in full by clicking on the link below, but here is a transcription of everything he had to say on the superhero ensemble. There's some very interesting bits of information here, so be sure to sound off with your thoughts in the usual place. On How And Why He Took The Job: "Kevin Feige I'd known for some time because I was dancing around with Marvel because I love superheroes and I love comic books. I'd seen him at lunch. I took a meeting and looked at the script and I was like, 'The script has to go but here are my thoughts on what you should do'. And I've done that a bunch. As favours. I've done a lot
