

In an interview with MTV Splash Page, director Joss Whedon was asked whether he would return to helm a sequel to Marvel's The Avengers (a.k.a. Avengers Assemble) and managed to avoid giving a direct answer. Considering the movie has so far received almost unanimous praise, it's an extremely worrying thought to think he wouldn't choose to direct the planned follow up which is rumoured to be set for release in 2015. Whedon also once again teases what we might see on the DVD/Blu-ray. Get More: Movie Trailers, Movies Blog "You know, it was an extraordinary experience. The actors gave me so much. Marvel gave me so much trust and the movie that I said, 'Well, if I was going to do this I'd like to do this.' And that's the movie I made. They only ever moved it forwards and collaborated and supported me. And I gotta tell you, that's unusual from a

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=58444>