

A few weeks ago, it was reported that Bradley Cooper - who was to star in the upcoming reboot/remake of the classic film The Crow - left the film due to shooting schedule conflicts. And now, Twitch Film is reporting that director has left the project as well. Rumblings are suggesting that Fresnadillo could do another reboot, Highlander, instead. Twitch also says that Before The Fall director F. Javier Gutierrez is a possibility to replace Fresnadillo. And now Twitch has learned that Fresnadillo, the director of Intruders and 28 Weeks Later, is gone. Though nothing is definite on this front yet we're hearing rumblings that Fresnadillo may take over the Highlander reboot for Summit but Highlander or no Highlander he's not doing The Crow any more and the hunt is on for a new director with Before The Fall's being floated as a possibility. What do you think of the news?

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=48168&t=Juan_Carlos_Fresnadillo_Exiting_The_Crow