

Speaking with Collider at the Toronto Film Festival while promoting Anna Karenina, actor Jude Law offers an update on the status of Warner Bros.' third Sherlock Holmes film. Last year, the studio hired Iron Man 3 scribe Drew Pearce to pen a third installment in the Guy Ritchie-directed series, but word on the threequel's progress has been rather quiet ever since. While not saying much, Law expresses his excitement for the potential third adventure of Holmes (played by Robert Downey Jr.) and Dr. Watson. "No I don't [when filming begins] yet. I mean there's certainly talk of it and I know there's a script being played around with, but Downey's a busy boy and I'm a busy boy so we'll see. But we want to [do another one]. We're a very happy team and we have a lot of fun and we also think there's still a

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=67411>