

Said Urban, "I personally actually found [the previous adaption] quite handy to look at that film to see what worked and what didn't work. It really helped me to inform me, as I was approaching the character, about choices I wanted to make and choices I didn't want to make." And as far as his preparation, Urban admitted that acting in a film where his face is 75% covered was a bit of a daunting task. "You know entering into any film is a challenge and this was an extraordinary challenge. First off the bat, knowing that I wasn't going to have the benefit and use of my eyes which is such a valuable asset and tool for an actor. And by the way, that's the way it should be done" Related Content: Twitter Buzz: DREDD New Teaser Poster For DREDD Running Time:
