

As the animated adventure Justice League: Doom unfolds, that information has reached enemy hands and is being used against the group. Set to be released on Blu-ray and DVD in February, Justice League: Doom is loosely adapted by the late Dwayne McDuffie from the classic comic book story "Tower Of Babel," written by Mark Waid. It features the voice talents of Tim Daly as Superman, Kevin Conroy as Batman, Susan Eisenberg as Wonder Woman, Michael Rosenbaum as the Flash, Carl Lumbly as Martian Manhunter and Nathan Fillion as Green Lantern. "I loved the idea that when you're dealing with the Justice League of America, there's only so many weapons you can throw at them and only so many threats that they can't handle," Waid reflects exclusively with Superhero Tooniverse. "So it occurred to me that information is a very slippery beast to have to fight, because you can't punch anything. I honestly believe

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/SuperHeroTooniverse/news/?a=48230&t=Justice_League_-_From_Babel_to_Doom_with_Mark_Waid