

I was at the Kapow! Comic Convention in London today and managed to grab the following video of Rufus Sewell (Adam in Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter) discussing the chances of a sequel to the film from Wanted director Timur Bekmambetov. He also touched upon whether or not his character - the leader of the vampires and main villain of the piece - will return in that possible follow-up. Footage from the film was also shown, so stay tuned to CBM later today for details on that and much, much more. "They couldn't quite make their mind up during filming whether my character lived or died actually at the end. But to tell you the truth as people kept saying, 'I'm a vampire so it doesn't really matter.'" "In terms of the sequel, I mean, from what I've seen it looks really exciting. Until I've seen the entire film, I couldn't make a

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=60043>