

Speaking with MovieFone, Kate Bosworth - perhaps best known for playing Lois Lane in the 2006 film Superman Returns - says that she hasn't thought about feeling like a sequel was necessary, saying that she saw every film experience she's had as an individual one. She also briefly comments on her excitement for the next Superman film Man Of Steel, starring Henry Cavill and Amy Adams. For more from Bosworth, click the link below. With "Man of Steel" coming out, did you feel, "We did a really good job with 'Superman Returns' and we should've had a chance to make another?" I didn't really think about it too much, you know. Because I think about each film experience as an individual one and then kind of move on, you know what I mean? I'm actually excited to see it. I really think Amy Adams is a great actress and I like

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=53402&t=Kate_Bosworth_Shares_Her_Thoughts_On_MAN_OF_STEEL