

The folks at Alibi.com talked to director Kenneth Branagh via a phone interview just after THOR opened recently. Much of what Branagh had to say has been said, and reported dozens of times and we have all heard it. However, he did have some interesting things to say on how the various Marvel directors are connecting Marvels "shared" universe. Joss Whedon is in Albuquerque now, in your wake, shooting The Avengers. Did you have any advice for him in carrying on the storyline? . We talked particularly about the way our movie was shaping up, and we had Joss see it pretty early on in post-production. I think that affected both the way he presented Thor in Avengers and also Loki's involvement in that story as well. He also spoke to me about the whole "Marvel Universe" and the whole atmosphere before he joined, anyway. So it's actually a pretty nice, collegiate atmosphere between

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GulfCoastAvengers/news/?a=38041&amp;t=Kenneth\_Branagh\_On\_Sharing\_Marvels\_Universe