

Something that we missed from Collider's revealing interview with Kevin Feige last night, was that the Marvel Studios President has seen a cut of Marc Webb's The Amazing Spider-Man. Now I realize directors/actors etc praising upcoming movies is nothing new, but bear in mind, although Spidey is a Marvel property and the studio does have some stake in the movie, TASM is a Sony production. So while it was unlikely that Feige would say anything negative if he didn't like it, it's a good sign that he found the movie "excellent".. Q: First off, have you seen The Amazing Spider-Man? I know it's not your movie. Kevin Feige: Yes. It's excellent. It's not finished, but what I saw was very encouraging and very good. And the whole notion of [I hate that they] "reboot this, that" should go away when people actually see the movie. Well there ya go,

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrants/news/?a=57857>