

Talking to The Playlist, Kevin Feige commented on the plans for possible TV shows based on Marvel character Jessica Jones and possibly the Hulk as well! Things have been pretty quiet recently about the companies small screen plans, so it's good to at least get some sort of brief update to let us know that they're still working on it! "I think they've talked about Hulk and a character named Jessica Jones who was in a comic series called Alias—the TV show will not be called Alias—but the comic series was. And they've certainly earmarked a lot of properties that they think has potential for various forms of TV." The Marvel Studios boss also went on to comment on Mark Ruffalo taking over as Bruce Banner from Ed Norton, comparing it to characters like James Bond and Doctor Who. He makes a good point, and once again drops enough hints about Ruffalo's performance

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=36657&t=Kevin_Feige_On_iAlias_iHulki_TV_Plans_Discusses_Mark_Ruffalos_Portrayal_Of_Bruce_Banner