

After two solo movies and an appearance in The Avengers, fans might figure they pretty much know what to expect from a Marvel Iron Man flick. But while speaking to ABC News, Kevin Feige suggests that along with a new director in Shane Black, we can also expect a different approach to the material.. “It’s going to be very different, very unique and I think not ascribe to any specific formula that they think they may have pegged us on. It’s all in the story. It’s where you take Tony Stark on his journey in an unexpected way and have him come out of the Avengers a slightly changed individual, which people will see when they see the movie. I believe each movie, whether it’s a new character movie or the sequel to an existing character movie, needs to have its own set, its own formula, its own rules.” From what we already know

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrants/news/?a=58143>