

With anticipation for Marvel Studios' crossover phenomenon The Avengers heating up from the approaching release of their Captain America: The First Avenger & Thor movies, many are at wonder of the studios' plans post-2012, sans Iron Man 3. And speaking with IGN exclusively, the studios' president Kevin Feige speaks essentially on just that. "X-Men was the dawn of the new Marvel cinematic age. 'Iron Man' was the dawn of the Marvel Studios age and the establishment of the Marvel Cinematic Universe and the beginning of that continuity. The Avengers is the next big step. Once all these characters come together, it's the culmination of all that has come before. It launches a new era and a new time in the history of our films. Not only will it be the first film that our new home studio, Disney, will be distributing, but it will also renew each of

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=35544&:t=Kevin\_Feige\_Speaks\_Highly\_On\_Movie\_Adaptations\_After\_iThe\_Avengersi