

Many of the new heroes being introduced in Phase 3 promise to change the Marvel Cinematic Universe in a significant way (we've already seen that with Doctor Strange), but Captain Marvel may be the true game changer. In a new interview with Variety, Marvel Studios President Kevin Feige elaborated on past comments that she's going to be this world's most powerful hero, and it sounds like not even Superman will be able to touch her. She's certainly going to be more than a match for Thor anyway! "If you had the collector cards of the Marvel characters and you could see the power levels, she would be off the charts compared to anyone that we've previously introduced in a film," he explained before going on to explain how that makes Brie Larson right for the role. "With Captain Marvel, who has powers that approach a level that we haven't seen before in our films, you need to counter-balance that by finding

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/captain\_marvel/kevin-feige-talks-brie-larson-as-captain-marvel-explains-why-her-a146995