

There's been a lot of conflicting reports about Inhumans, with some blaming a divide between Marvel Studios and Marvel TV for the delay and others claiming it's simply a matter of getting the project right before the cameras start rolling. Whether or not it really will ever happen remains to be seen, but in a new interview with Slash Film, Marvel Studios President Kevin Feige weighed in on where things stand. "I think Inhumans will happen for sure," he reveals. "I don't know when. I think it's happening on television. And I think as we get into Phase 4 as I've always said, it could happen as a movie. I think it would be super cool." Some may take that as confirmation that Inhumans will indeed happen, but Feige really doesn't seem sure, and it's rare that we see that sort of uncertainty from him. He doesn't even seem sure what's going on with Inhuman characters on the small screen, another worrying

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/inhumans/kevin-feige-weighs-in-on-the-possibility-of-inhumans-being-part-of-a146524>