

Everyone's favorite muscle-bound, nunchaku wielding, mechanic is set to make his debut on the Thundercats this Friday. MTV caught up with Richardson to talk about his extensive voice-over work , with an emphasis on his feline counterpart. MTV: Obviously, there was the appeal of being a big franchise character, but for you, personally, what drew you to playing Panthro? KMR: Well, first of all, he was one of my favorite characters. I mean, I must say, I love looking at Cheetara, I think she's really sexy and all that stuff, and Lion-O, of course, with the sword is badass. But Panthro stood out for me because he seemed like not only a strong badass, but he was kind of cool, you know? He was like the cool cat. And he drove the ThunderTank, which was badass. So just the whole idea of playing this guy was way beyond me. It's kind of
