

His video which was only meant for the executives at Warner Bros. was accidentally posted on YouTube. Once it found it's way online the video has become a sensation, resulting in millions of views, and backed by celebrity tweets. Warner Bros. then put Tancharoen to the test by giving him $2 million to create a web series called "Mortal Kombat: Legacy." The series was also well received and Warners gave him the keys to the kingdom. He will direct the next full featured film based on the popular video game. Filming will start in March, and the movie will hit theaters in 2013. BF: In all honestly, when you made "Rebirth," how likely did you think it was you'd be here now, about to direct a full-length feature film? KT: It was such a crapshoot for me. I honestly felt it was 50/50. Previous to doing it I had some discussions with Warner

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/debbiedowner/news/?a=47389&t=Kevin_Tancharoen_the_Director_of_the_New_Mortal_Kombat_Movie_Reveals_More_About_His_Vision