

The late Ricardo Montalban first portrayed Eugenics superman Khan Noonian Singh during Star Trek's first season in the episode "Space Seed." Some fifteen years later, producer Harve Bennett came up with the idea of resurrecting the character in Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan, much to the delight of audiences and Montalban himself. This interview with the late actor was conducted by CBM editor Ed Gross back in the 1990s. RICARDO MONTALBAN ON KHAN: IN HIS OWN WORDS "In those days, there wasn't the dearth of material that we have today on television. Some shows were quite special, and certainly Star Trek was one of them. I was quite familiar with it. As an actor, I thought it would be great fun to do it. Khan was not the run of the mill sort of portrayal. It had to have a different dimension. That attracted me very much. And when they sent me

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/startrekthenandnow/news/?a=61227>