

It must be good to be Mark Millar right now. Both he and The Ultimates' artist Bryan Hitch were credited at the end of Captain America: The First Avenger (the same honor is expected for The Avengers too) and the past few weeks have seen announcement after announcement of his various creator owned comic books heading to the big screen. Well, in the same announcement of the formation of "Millarworld Productions", I noticed the following excerpt which seemingly confirms the forthcoming announcement of Kick-Ass. Mark's sequel to 2010's Kick-Ass is about to be announced and Top Gun director Tony Scott will make Nemesis — about a criminal mastermind who wreaks havoc on police chiefs around the world — which Millar released as a graphic novel last year. And in even more interesting news, the paper reveals that the prolific comic book writer also has plans to launch projects on the small screen through

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=49026&t=iKick-Ass 2i Is About To Be Announced And Mark Millar Has Plans For TV Shows