

Talking with The Hollywood Reporter while promoting his directorial debut movie, People Like Us, screenwriter Alex Kurtzman also manages to make time for a Star Trek-related discussion, where he shares a few new details regarding the upcoming follow up to J. J. Abrams' 2009 reboot movie. The main focus of the discussion is the evolution that the crew of the Enterprise will undergo after their formation in the first movie, and how the character of James T. Kirk (Chris Pine) will bear the responsibility as the new captain of the ship. Check it out right below...

"I can say the assumption that we did not want to make was that just because he's in the chair and they're on the bridge together that they're the crew that you remember from the original series. They're not -- the crew from the original series had gone on many, many journeys, they were a well-oiled

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Jolt17/news/?a=62505>