

MovieFone caught up with Kirsten Dunst to talk about a whole list of topics. Not surprisingly the rebooted Spider-Man movie, The Amazing Spider-Man, came up. Dunst said that she doesn't feel as if the new movie will push the ones she worked on out of peoples minds, and went on to say that the upcoming reboot will be for a new generation that will enjoy it. From MovieFone: What are your feelings about the Spider-Man movies being rebooted so soon? Does it feel at all like what you guys did is being erased in the sense of almost "Look at the chemistry between Andrew Garfield and Emma Stone now, forget about what Tobey and Kirsten had." "Right. I don't feel that way. I feel what we did was special and I don't think that goes away. I don't think so." Do you think there's a push to forget your movies and just pay attention to

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=49674&t=Kirsten Dunst Says That Raimis iSpider-Mani Series Is Special Enough Not To Be Forgotten