

During a recent interview with the LA Times to promote the release of John Wick: Chapter 2, Laurence Fishburne was asked if he'll be making a return as Daily Planet editor Perry White in Justice League. Unfortunately, that won't be happening due to some scheduling issues, but as Zack Snyder only wanted him for a day, it sounds like it was probably only going to be a brief cameo appearance anyway! "They asked me to come for a day, but I couldn't work it out, schedule-wise," the actor explained. "And really, what do you need the newspaperman in Justice League for? You want to see the Flash. You want to see Aquaman. You want to see Wonder Woman. You want to see the Lantern." That's a fair point, but in praising the DC Films Universe, Fishburne made a pretty unexpected admission about Marvel! "We've been waiting 35 years for these [characters] to show up on the screen. What were they doing over there?"

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/justice_league/laurence-fishburne-on-why-he-turned-down-justice-league-role-and-a148878