

Source: THR Max Borenstein (The Seventh Son) has been tapped to write the planned remake of Godzilla. He currently wrote screenplay for Seventh Son for Legendary which is currently in pre-production. Apparently, the brass at Legendary are so impressed with his work that he's being given the responsibility to kickstart a potential tentpole franchise for the company. Sounds risky to me, seeing as he virtually has no other credits to his name unless you count writing a litany of films that were later re-written by others. Time will tell if that trend of near misses continues here or if this is indeed Mr. Borensstein's big break. Gareth Edwards, the director of the indie sci-fi movie Monsters, is attached to direct the Legendary Pictures film. Warner Bros. will distribute through Legendary. David Goyer (The Dark Knight) worked on the last version of the script. It's currently unclear as to whether

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=49636&t=Legendary_Pictures_Hires_emMax_Borensteinem_To_Pen_Godzilla_Remake