

WalesOnline (and the Wales On Sunday newspaper) report that The Dark Knight Rises has found its Batcave in the Brecon Beacons in Wales. A waterfall will reportedly double for the exterior of the cave, with filming already having taken place a few weeks ago. According to the site, "The 90ft waterfall near the village of Coelbren is the highest in the park and a tourist favourite because of a path that takes intrepid walkers behind the waterfall." One local, named in the report as an "insider", who spotted the movie being filmed added: "They were there for a couple of days just a few weeks ago. I understand it's going to be used in the opening sequence of the film, as Batman discovers the Batcave. But we'll have to wait and see." Samantha Games, of the Brecon Beacons National Park Authority, said the region is popular with filmmakers because of its unspoilt views

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=45331&t=Location And Brief Filming Details For iThe Dark Knight Risesi New Batcave Revealed