

By: @_MarkJulian It's been a while but Looking Back is well....back. And for the 10th installment we're going to look at Spider-Man 4 which was in early development before Spider-Man 3 was released to virtually universal disappointment. Not to say that the film was bad per say, but the bar for the third installment was set incredibly high thanks to its predecessor and the the final product came up well short. However, before the film's release, Sony was counting on the third film dominating the box office and was quietly planning for not only the fourth film but a fifth as well, which was to be shot simultaneously. Ideas were actively being discussed, shot down and reintroduced by involved parties before the whole thing finally collapsed. There were also a lot of interesting and familiar names attached to the script and villain roles as well. Ultimately, we ended

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=62722>