

Previously, I took a look at the history of all the proposed Batman movies Warner Bros. had in development after Batman & Robin and before Batman Begins. In this latest edition, I'll be looking at Universal Pictures' proposed Namor the Sub-Mariner project of 2006 that was never produced. Ultimately, some very interesting news emerged from Universal's September 13, 2006 announcement that could have a significant impact on the Marvel Cinematic Universe [Namor Avengers Theory] although its probably not the news that Universal Pictures initially hoped for. There were very early rumblings back in 2005 that a Sub-Mariner movie was in the works and the always reputable Variety even went so far as to report that then, Harry Potter director Chris Columbus was attached to direct. However, on September 13, 2006, Universal Pictures announced that director Jonathan Mostow [Terminator 3: Rise of the Machines, The Surrogates] was attached to rewrite

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=45841&t=Looking_Back_6_The_Failed_emNamor_The_Sub-Marinerem_Movie_of_2006