

Looper is a film that many people are heralding as the next step in the evolution of sci-fi films. Recieving almost universal praise following its debut at TIFF, here's a Q&A session with the film's stars and directors. Why is it important for intelligence in action movies? JGL: "I want people to have fun, but I want them to leave with something to talk about. And Looper offers that" Bruce: "It's a really great science fiction film, and it doesn't really compare to anything else I've done." (@Rian Johnson) Which actor did you approach first? RJ: "I met Joe years ago and wanted to work together. I wrote the part with him in mind. And then we cast Bruce in it, and I was thrilled he wanted to do it. He's a tremendous actor...and, well, he's Bruce Willis. What do you say about criticism of violence having an affect on kids (i.e. Columbine)? RJ:

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=66875>