

Lucas Till did a decent job as Havok in the first X-Men: First Class, but like a couple of his young team mates in the movie, he wasn't really give a whole lot to do. Hopefully that will change in the now officially announced sequel, which Till confirms he will return for. He also acknowledges the changes made to Havok's powers in the movie and says he hopes things will be a bit more comic fan-friendly in the next one. And, why not throw in a bit of Polaris action while we're at it! I like the way you think son.. "All I know is that my mom told me we're going to start shooting in January. It's funny because she tells me everything that goes on before I know. I don't know if you saw, but Havok shoots hula hoops out of his body. I remember when (director Matthew Vaughn)

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrants/news/?a=61278>