

George Perez's run on Superman has been criticized to no end. Perez however has stated in recent interviews that DC had his hands tied as to what stories he could do. He also said that not being able to see what Grant Morrison was doing in Action Comics, which was set before Clark became Superman, limited his vision for the series. At this year's Toronto Comic Con Perez has given one more reason why his run on The Man Of Tomorrow's self title didn't last. According to him Zack Snyder, Christopher Nolan and the producers of Man Of Steel are having a say in what is going on in Superman comics. "They have to deal with people producing the movie, who also had a say in what's going on in the comic as well. My one fear, I'm not producing a comic, I'm producing a storyboard for a movie, that's not
