

"I don't know," Marc Webb told Entertainment Weekly when he was asked about whether or not he will return to helm a follow-up to The Amazing Spider-Man. "I've said this before, but it's like asking a woman who's just given birth if she wants to get pregnant again. You know, I need to nurse the baby for a little while." A sequel to this July's movie may not be the only film Andrew Garfield's Peter Parker/Spider-Man appears in as rumours continue to run rampant that he will make a cameo in a future The Avengers installment. "It certainly would be fun. I can't deny that," added Webb. "But there are all these twists in Spider-Man. There's a lot to explore before that would probably happen." As for whether he'd like to bring Spider-Woman to the big screen at some point, he said: "You never know! I don't know if I'd direct

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=62695>